Summary: The JAC proposes to conduct an in-depth analysis of youth from Chicago committed to DJJ by the Cook County Juvenile Court. The analysis will merge data sets from DJJ, the Department of Children and Family Services, and the Chicago Police Department. Combined these data sets will give a more complete picture of youths' progression through the system, recidivism, history of separation from family and initial insight into dispositional data. This initial data analysis may lead to combining other data sets from relevant stakeholders providing a complete picture of opportunities to avoid commitments to DJJ and better serve youths in a community based setting.
